Materials & Craftsmanship

Palais Royal is built through extensive sculptural metalwork, with individually formed branches, acanthus foliage and rocaille motifs assembled into a complex architectural framework. Gilded surfaces are carefully finished to articulate the relief and depth of the ornament, while crystal elements are individually positioned to introduce movement and luminosity throughout the composition.

ARCHITECTURAL PRODUCT SPECIFICATION

Palais Royal is conceived as architecture capable of carrying true decorative grandeur. Rising through double-height volumes with the presence of a suspended sculpture, it brings ceremony, historical richness and visual drama to great halls and formal interiors—an interpretation of French Rococo tradition at a scale intended to define the space around it.
